

Choosing a base colour

DESIGN FUNDAMENTALS

The first thing you need is a main colour for your brand

Don't overthink this!

(It's the easy part)

To help you decide...

1. Check the colors of your competitors.

Are they all using a particular colour? If so, stay clear!

2. Are there any colours that appeal to your particular audience?

If yes (and if all your competitors aren't using them) — try this colour.

Weekly Wednesday Workshop

Every Wednesday, Ricardo host's a free workshop for customers (current and future!) Here's a recording of our last workshop.

To help you decide...

1. Check the colors of your competitors.

Are they all using a particular colour? If so, stay clear!

2. Are there any colours that appeal to your particular audience?

If yes (and if all your competitors aren't using them) — try this colour.

This only works if your competitors aren't targeting your exact niche

This would technically be the 'brand' colour. But we'll use the gradient version for our website.

Your turn

Find a colour that is:

1. Unlike your competitors
2. Appeals to your target audience
3. Has the right tone of voice for your website (e.g. cheerful or corporate)

EXERCISE

Choose a brand colour for your website.
Test it as a full colour background for your hero section.
